Syracuse University's School of Education will be hosting an evening presentation for admitted students in New York City!

Thursday, April 3rd 2014 at 6:00PM.

Lubin House, 11 East 61st Street, Manhattan

Please call the Lubin House to RSVP: (212) 826 0335

Presenters include:
- Interim Dean Joanna Masinglia
- Assistant Dean Amie Redmond
- Associate Professor Jeffery Mangram
- Admissions Advisor Zach Schuster
- Recent Alumni William Drew

Making Your Mark at SU

Syracuse University is a place where students from diverse backgrounds stretch their limits and learn from scholars of distinction, industry leaders, and community members. Together, they explore, discover, and break boundaries as they address real-world issues. And by connecting theory with practice, SU students learn to make their mark by preparing for the world in the world.

A National Leader in Inclusive Urban Education

Syracuse University's School of Education, a national leader in improving and informing educational practice for diverse communities, is committed to the principle that diverse learning communities create the conditions that both enrich the educational experience and provide opportunities for all to realize their full potential. The School of Education pioneered the inclusion movement in the United States, making way for all learners to participate fully in mainstream classrooms and other inclusive learning environments.