Transforming Education Together

SCHOOL OF EDUCATION

YOU HAVE THE HEART OF AN EDUCATOR.

In Syracuse University's School of Education, you'll build the skills to empower your passion.

Here, you'll expand your talents as an educator through immersive training, unique research and creative opportunities—from field experience starting in your first year to shadowing professionals, from live educational simulations to engaging practicums. You'll sharpen the skills you'll need to impact future generations of learners, educators and leaders.

You'll join a highly selective cohort of fewer than 125 students and be embraced into a tightknit, inclusive and equitable community engaged in life-changing experiences.

Our programs will prepare you to inspire others, promote community and influence educational policy—and you'll gain firsthand experiences to jump-start your career.

Programs of Study

Non-Teacher Certification Program

➤ Selected Studies in Education

This interdisciplinary program draws on areas of study across Syracuse University to give students a broad understanding of education policy and practice. Our most flexible major—with 30 credits available—allows you to add a double major or minor from the College of Arts and Sciences. Some sample areas include:

- Cultural Foundations of American Schooling: Schooling and Diversity
- Education, Technology and Media
- Physical Activity: Sport, Coaching and Recreation
- Post-Secondary and Human Services Fields
- Pre-Teaching: The Study of Teaching, Learning and Inclusion

Personalized Pathways to Graduate Study

- The School of Education offers more than 40 graduate opportunities to complement your bachelor's degree, including master's degrees and certificates of advanced study.
- Many master's degree programs can be completed in 12-15 months.
- Graduate studies can be supported with generous scholarships.

The School of Education difference.

> Small School Atmosphere with Large University Resources

The School of Education has the perfect balance. You'll enjoy small classes and close advising relationships with faculty and staff, and you can access the extensive resources and benefits of the broader Syracuse University support system. Once you graduate, you'll be linked to the Orange network, which includes alumni in over 160 countries.

> Hands-on Experience from the Start

During your first year, you'll take classes in your major, and most students engage in an internship or field experience in public schools or the community. That's an opportunity not offered to first-year students in many other education programs.

> Applied Learning: Placements and Internships

Hone your skills with extensive fieldwork throughout your studies. We offer real-world experiences through a wide variety of internships and teaching placements, far exceeding New York State's requirements for hours working in schools. And we'll ensure you have access to the transportation you need to fulfill your teacher preparatory placement.

> Bridge to the City

Among potential field placements is a semester-long, guided student teaching experience in New York City. This is a unique opportunity for students to broaden their perspectives on cultures, families and professional practices. And it's a great way to connect to NYC-area employers and School of Education alumni.

“The School of Education has made me realize what it means to have the heart of a teacher—to want people to learn and grow and to be successful even beyond what we teach in the classroom.

> Educational Simulations

Syracuse University is a leader in the use of training simulations. You'll gain comfort and confidence role-playing in a range of scenarios during fully interactive, clinically tested sessions with live actors playing parents, administrators and others.

> Leading the Way in Antiracist, Inclusive and Equitable Education

We are committed to improving and informing educational practice for all learners, including underserved communities. Our firm belief is that diverse learning communities enrich the educational experience and provide opportunities for every learner to succeed.
